The origin of some records, such as early handwritten notes, is unclear and may represent court notes by William R. Cavitt, club presentations, studies by other Cavitt family members, or simply creative endeavors. Of note are two handwritten copies of the essay or speech entitled, "Resolved that the Late War was Beneficial to the United States," January 28, 1970. The series also contains periodical Nuggets (May 1923-March 1926) and monograph, Dunallan or Know What You Judge, 1882.

Series 12: Photography (6 cubic ft.)

This series contains approximately 2,200 vintage prints, the bulk consist of fiber-based silver gelatin snapshots (ca. 1900-1949) taken by Fred Cavitt, who was an avid amateur photographer. Approximately 1,100 of Fred Cavitt's original 3 ½" x 5 ¾" [cellulose nitrate?] negatives were accessioned with the collection. These photographs document early Bryan life and serve as an important source for images of historic Bryan buildings and homes; many of which were reproduced in the monograph, Brazos County History, 1986. Photographs of Cavitt homes include those in Bryan, Weelock, and Baston. Subjects also include dams and bridges, oil fields, Texas A & M College, and City National Bank.

Series 12 also contains formal studio portraits in the following formats: cartes de visite (ca. 1869-1900?) cabinet cards (ca. 1860's-1910's?), and 25 tintypes (1860-1900?). 52 cartes de visite were later added from the Brazos Genealogy Association. Since the collection has been in use before the current repository's ownership, some Cavitt photographs may be located in other collections, such as the Brazos Genealogy Association Photographs.
