

Van Riper Collection
#0041

A founder of the Citizens For Historic Preservation, and active in many areas of local history and preservation, Dr. Van Riper earned his Ph.D. in Political Science from the University of Chicago. Dr. Van Riper's career includes service on the faculties of Cornell University, Northwestern University and George Washington University, as well as serving as a visiting professor at numerous universities both here and abroad. For seven years, Dr. Van Riper was head of Texas A&M University's Department of Political Science, then for four years served as the department's first Director of the Graduate Public Administration Program. He still teaches Public Personnel Administration at the Bush School of Government and Public Service, and classes at Texas A & M. He has written several books and special studies, and numerous articles in refereed journals. In 1990, he received the Waldo Award from the American Society for Public Administration for his lifetime contribution to the discipline. Areas of interest include American government, general administration, personnel management (especially the U.S. Civil Service), organizational theory and military management. Dr. Van Riper is currently Professor Emeritus (and is still teaching) of Political Science at Texas A&M University.

This ongoing collection demonstrates both his love of local history and local architecture, and his devotion to rigorous research.
